

LETTER FROM THE EDITOR

The Editorial Committee of HOW, keeping in mind the Annual ASOCOPI Congress, which this year will be celebrated in the city of Cartagena, presents in this issue a variety of articles, both theoretical and practical, in the hope that they will complement in some way, the topics dealt with at the Congress.

The Committee feels that ASOCOPI should continue to produce a magazine of the quality of HOW. Indeed, HOW is practically the only EFL journal in our country that gives some teachers the opportunity to publish their ideas on Applied Linguistics and to the vast majority the possibility to keep up with the latest developments in the field mentioned above.

This issue includes papers that touch on the following topics: teacher training, collaborative/experiential learning, action research, testing fluency in speaking, the art of University teaching, teaching English to children, teaching grammar and writing, teaching language learning strategies, Jamaica: A New Literary Setting, Strengthening English Language Proficiency through Parent-Child Collaboration and C.A.L.L.

The Editorial Committee hopes that English teachers will find in this issue valuable tools to put to good use in their teaching profession. We look forward to receiving feedback at the ASOCOPI Congress in Cartagena.
